DOGS THAT WEIGH A POUND.

The Chihuahua Chiquita Dog-A Beautiful

Creature-A Scared Traveler. Every Mexican owns at least one Chihuahua chiquita dog. They are beautiful little creatures and of two varieties-one with long, silky hair, the other with a short smooth coat that is soft as velvet to the touch. I have seen full grown specimens that weighed a trifle over a pound and young puppies about the size of field mice. They have large, ex-pressive eyes and the best of dispositions. A fashionable Philadelphia lady, with one of these diminutive creatures as her companion on a promenade down Chestnut street, would attract as much attention as did Barnum's Jumbo. We, the undersigned Banks and Bankers, will pay all prizes drawn in The Louisian a State Latteries which may be presented at our counters.

Any first introduction to the Chihushua chiquita was in Presidio del Norte, Texas, a little town on the bank of the Rio Grande. I reached there late in the afternoon, with a letter of late in the to the principal merchant, an American named Russell. He received me very cordially and gave me the keys to his corral and feed box. "Put up your horse," he said, "but look out for the dog. I'd send one of the Mexicans around, but they're all busy

I was bitten by a dog once and have a wholesome respect for the smallest and most inoffensive of the race. As I led my horse around to the corral gate I examined my six shooter to see if it was properly loaded and when I entered the enclosure my trepidation was not diminished when I saw staring me in the face an enormous sign with the legend, "Bevere of the dog!" painted on it in great black characters.

A cold perspiration began to coze from every pore of my body and if the sombrero that I wore hadn't been so heavy I believe that my rising hair would have lifted it off my head. I walked on the lee side of my horse, my cocked six shooter in my hand, with every sense alert to warn me of the approach of the ferocious monster, who was no doubt sleeping in one corner of the corral. With trembling fingers I unsaddled my horse and my knees knocked together as I measured out his feed. So far I had escaped the notice of the dog, and I was backing toward the corral gate, inwardly congratulating myself on my fortunate escape, when I heard a yelping bark, about as loud as the chirp of an English sparrow, and one of these Chihuahua chiquitas came bounding across the yard, making leaps that measured at least six inches in length. He looked so ridiculous that I burst out laughing, whereat he stopped barking and began to wag his liliputian tail and frisk about like a rat. I learned afterward that he was the only canine about the place, and his owner has the reputation all along the frontier of being a confirmed practical joker.— Cor. Philadelphia Times,

Endangering a Clerk's Position. If the women who spend so much of their time in shopping day after day only knew how much they jeopardize the positions of the clerks by not buying per-haps they would not spend so much time in overhauling box after box of goods out the least intention of buying.

The employer or floor-walker is supposed to know if the lady, who has been for the last half hour looking over a box of laces, intends buying or not. He does not know that the laces are only being looked at, to see the newest patterns, or to consume time while waiting for a friend. The same thing has occurred aring the day, and, perhaps days previous-ladies leaving the counter without buying. The proprietor then gets the idea that the clerk is not smart; he has seen a number during the past week leave her counter, and when the clerk receives her pay envelore on Saturday night she finds in it a short note say ing her "services are no longer required,"

The Costllest Wine in the World. It costs only $272 a drop. The wine I refer to is kept in the ancient cellar under the Hotel de Ville in the city of Bremen, and was deposited there over 250 years ago. There were twelve large cases, each having a name of one of the Apostles, and, strange to say, that having the name of Judas is the most highly esteemed. One case of the wine, containing five oxhoft of 204 bottles, cost 500 rix dollars in 1624. Including the expenses of keeping up the cellar, and of the contributions and interest, an oxhoft costs at the present time 555,657,640 rix dollars, and consequently a bottle is worth 2,723,812 rix dollars; a glass or the eighth part of a bottle is worth 340,476 rix dollars or $272,380, or $272 per drop. A burgomaster of Bremen is privileged to have one bottle whenever he entertains a distinguished guest who enjoys a German or European reputation,-Foreign

Health of the Cities of China. The popular notion that the inhabitants of Chinese cities are given to unwholesome habits does not seem to be well founded. Dr. Dodgeon, in a recent work on the diet, dress, and dwellings of the Chinese, says that the people have admir-ingly adapted themselves to their surroundings, and enjoy a maximum of comfort. "They have a good many lessons yet to teach us in respect of living and practical health." After an experience of over twenty years with them, he says that "they are subject to fewer diseases, their diseases are more amenable to treatment, and they possess a greater freedom from acute and inflammatory affections of all kinds, if, indeed, these can be said to exist at all," than obtains among western nations.-New York Sun.

Observatories Working at Specialties. Our principal observatories all work at specialties. At Harvard the relative magnitude of the stars is the chief object of study; at Princeton, spectroscopy; at Allegheny observatory, the dark, part of the solar spectrum and the effect of the invisible heat rays on the earth; at the National observatory, positions and orbits of satellites; at Cincinnati, double stars; at Chicago, Jupiter's surface, and at Al-bany and Yale, perfecting maps of the beavens.—New York Sun.
